For more than two weeks, Munson Medical Center (MMC) and the Michigan Nurses Association (MNA) have continued work toward a new collective bargaining agreement under a contract extension that expires today (March 3) at noon.

While the two bargaining teams have not yet come to a tentative agreement on a new contract, this week's negotiations have been collaborative and productive. In keeping with the spirit in which these negotiations have proceeded, both sides have agreed to remain at the bargaining table through the expiration of the contract extension and continue working this afternoon toward a tentative agreement.
